

All About Me

Here's another great idea from Marian Hodge, a K Building Blocks teacher from Rincon Elementary School in Rincon, GA:

"Beginning kindergarten is pretty important stuff and what better way to show your children how important they are than to ask them to tell the class something about themselves.

When the children come to school for Open House the week before school starts, I give each one a brown lunch-size paper bag with a letter attached. The letter explains that we choose a Student of the Day and on their day they will be asked to share their pictures.

On their special day the pictures are shared and displayed for all to enjoy throughout the day. The next day the pictures come down and are sent home, and the next Student of the Day is in the limelight.

I do this in conjunction with the Getting to Know You component of Building Blocks. The kids are having a blast with this! They are all eagerly awaiting their turns."

Marian shared a K storage idea with us last month. Thanks for another wonderful idea, Marian! See #6 in the Handout section for the note to attach to the bags.)
